

Unsurpassed Customer Service Drives Belden Brick & Supply

For more than 40 years, Belden Brick & Supply has approached masonry as fine art, designed by visionary architects and implemented by impeccable craftsmen. The desire to create architectural beauty began with the Belden family back in Canton, Ohio, in 1885, when Henry Belden started The Belden Brick Company. In 1979, his great-grandson, Paul Belden III, started Belden Brick & Supply in Grand Rapids, Michigan, distributing quality brick for local architectural and residential projects. Today, Belden Brick & Supply services most of Michigan with showroom and yard locations in Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo and Saginaw. The company, led by Henry Belden's great-great-grandson, Todd, provides its customers with an expanded product offering including stone, tile and hardscape material and supplies. Recently, Belden Brick & Supply became an employee-owned company, underscoring its commitment to its employees and to continuing its unsurpassed customer service process from the showroom selection visit to the final product delivery—something of which its team is very proud.

Belden Brick & Supply has been a member of the MIM for more than 15 years. "I find working with an association that supports the industry that I love to be one of our membership's greatest benefits," says Todd. "Without a doubt, the MIM is the promotional and educational leader of the masonry industry. I recommend new members take advantage of what the MIM offers, be open to learning everything they can from industry veterans and be open to new trends."

Todd has seen a post-pandemic movement to a less disposable culture in America and sees masonry as anything but disposable. "It is a high-quality, tangible product that will last from decades to hundreds of years," he says. "There is no other building material like it."
