

Complete Enclosures: Problem-Solving for Nearly a Decade

For nearly a decade, Complete Enclosures Inc. has assisted building owners, construction managers and general contractors in completing their building designs. The Complete Enclosures team members are accomplished problem-solvers. Whether the issue is related to structural masonry, veneer leaking or cracking, older building restoration or construction schedule and coordination, the team works to solve whatever problem may arise.

Complete Enclosures invests in its employees and the communities it serves, providing high-paying local construction career opportunities and encouraging its employees to give back to their communities. They offer extensive training and support to their team members, many of whom come from multi-generational masonry families, to ensure the company's mission of problem-solving for its customers remains at the forefront.

As a member of the MIM since day one, the company recognizes the invaluable assistance the MIM provides in designing and converting buildings to masonry. "Not only does the MIM provide contractors with training, design assistance and networking", said Jon Davenport, vice president and owner of Complete Enclosures. "It also offers these valuable services to general contractors, building owners and design professionals."

Jon advises new members to "lean into" the MIM and not be afraid to ask questions or for help. The association along with its member suppliers and contractors are always willing to assist with whatever issue may arise.

According to Jon, masonry construction's greatest benefit is its ability to be both a structural and an architectural element on a building. "Very few products offer the versatility of masonry and are as universally seen by the public as high quality, safe and beautiful," he adds.
