

Integrated Exteriors: Committed to Safety

Integrated Exteriors has built a solid reputation by providing professionalism, quality and safety standards unsurpassed in the masonry world. By working at the front end with local builders, the company has effectively converted many projects to masonry. Their team of skilled masons and laborers is responsible for many of the West Michigan's masonry buildings we see today—most recently including the beautiful Ada downtown redevelopment and mixed-use projects in downtown Grand Rapids.

Integrated Exteriors approaches each job with a can-do attitude and with safety always in mind. “Our team is focused on bringing craftsmanship to every project, big or small,” says Jeff Schipper, president, Integrated Exteriors. “We work hard to deliver a structure of which the customer can be proud. In addition, our commitment to safety ensures a better environment for our employees and an accelerated timeline for customers.”

The team works closely with the MIM to ensure that important details such as control joint placement and flashing are properly installed. In fact, Integrated Exteriors continues to take advantage of the numerous training programs and workshops available through the MIM and will be hosting a control joint workshop for their foremen in early 2022. A MIM member for more than 10 years, Jeff is thankful for the partnership and adds, “We appreciate the MIM's ongoing support as we work to convert projects to masonry and create lasting and stunning structures.”
